"10 Fenton Family Signatures"

heirloom memories

We continue the countdown to our 100th birthday in 2005 with the fourth installment of the Centennial Collection. Each year leading up to our centennial celebration, two family members will select a signature piece that reflects their personal preferences. Our 2003 offering features two special selections from the late Bill Fenton's son, Randy, and his eldest son Don, who passed away in February 2003.

"At Woodland's Edge" is a lasting tribute to Don's personal style of the art glass he so deeply loved. He particularly appreciated the darker colors, especially Favrene. He loved the outdoors and would always request a "touch of life" . . . the addition of a bird, butterfly or other "critter", to almost every decoration we developed. He found these lively additions charming, which was so fitting of his personality. Robin Spindler designed the handsome pattern, which is accented with bands of 22k gold. This Don Fenton Memorial vase will be inscribed with signatures of the current ten Fenton family members and will bear the Centennial Collection logo.

"Rainforest" on Black
Randy Fenton

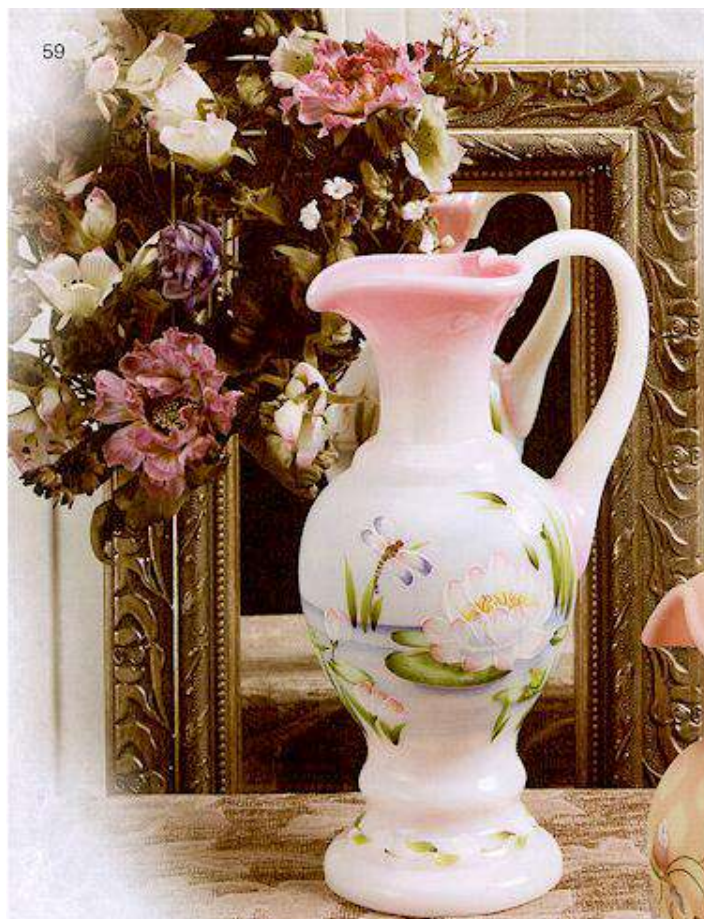

Randy chose this particular medallion vase mould from Pilgrim Glass for its classic simplicity. The midnight sky gives Robin Spindler's handpainted "Rainforest" motif a powerful feel with a majestic tropical bird reflecting Randy's love of natural beauty. This handsome vase will be inscribed with Randy's signature and bear the Centennial Collection logo.

The Connoisseur Collection

Fenton's commitment to the production of rare and unusual glass treatments.

"Tranquil Pond" on Rosalene

The addition of pure gold in the formula allows the lovely pink shade in Rosalene glass to magically appear as the glass is reheated in the forming process. An atmosphere of serene and undisturbed tranquility is captured in Stacy Williams' timeless design of water lilies under a pale blue sky. A delightful petite frog is seen basking in his own little world.

"Adoration Rose" on Burmese

Bill Fenton's love of Burmese glass has been well documented. As the proud owner of an extensive collection that included the diamond optic - a process he created - Bill delighted in flowers, and his favorite was the rose. Stacy Williams created a beautifully illustrated damask-style design using dimensional enamel paint to dramatic effect throughout each bud. This Bill Fenton Memorial piece will be inscribed with signatures of the current ten Fenton family members.

"Song Sparrow" on Burmese

This charming basket is a companion piece to the popular Burmese lamp offered in 2002's Connoisseur Collection. Stacy Williams' natural "Song Sparrow" design blends beautifully with the pastel background of classic Burmese glass.

"Liby Garden" on Blue Burmese

Pastel shades of rose and powder blue blend beautifully to form this historic color. A delicate bell shade in soft Blue Burmese is the perfect canvas for Kim Barley's elegant design of rich, dimensional lilies. The graceful scrollwork throughout the painting gives this lovely lamp a striking yet symmetrical look offset by the slender hardware.

"Hanging Hearts" on Willow Green Opalescent

Dave Fetty and his team of skilled craftsmen have truly recaptured the magic of Fenton Art Glass from the 20's. To create this exceptional piece, a gob of Willow Green Opalescent glass is dotted with intense Cobalt Blue glass. During several re-heating processes, Fenton craftsmen use an ice pick to slowly pull the Cobalt into heart shapes and a pontil to pull threads of Cobalt through the hearts to give the pattern a vision of hanging hearts. A Cobalt base complements the 9 1/2" pitcher.

Ruby Amberina Stretch

Fenton's ruby glass is made with selenium and cadmium, materials sensitive to heat, and interesting color variations often appear, resulting in the red-orange effect called "amberina". By spraying the glass with a mixture of metallic salts before being reheated and brought to its final shape, the finishing process often creates a myriad of striations and even a somewhat rough texture known as "stretch" glass. New for the second half of 2003 are the panelled basket with the handpainted Wine Country decoration, a swan bowl and an elegant pair of candlesticks.
