Perfumes A collection of three uniquely different designs appealing to a variety of tastes. Iridized Violet, with the addition of iced accents, gives Robin Spindler's pattern of daisy petals an elegant allure. Willow Green Opalescent was used in the reproduction of a Devilbiss bottle produced during the 1940's that is topped with a feather stopper designed by Jon Saffell in 1996. 22k gold enhances Robin's leaf design that encircles this delicate bottle. Martha Reynold's stylized dragonflies floating through an open meadow are perfect for the round perfume in Pink Chiffon Overlay.

Daisy Lane

Dancing daisy petals are the perfect complement to French Opalescent. Kim Planché's design of cheery daisies and leaves with violet accents peer through a trellis optic as blades of grass sway with the gentle breeze. A Pink Chiffon ring creates a soft touch to this delicate spring collection. A beautiful coordinate to our Pink Chiffon color statement.

Pink Chiffon Opalescent

Fenton is proud to introduce a new color statement for our spring collection - Pink Chiffon Opalescent. This unique color is achieved by adding erbium and bone ash to the glass formula to create an exceptional opalescent shade of pink that remains true to color in different shades of lighting. The hobnail shapes are among the most historic and loved of all Fenton designs.

The blooming of the perennial crocus is the first indication that spring is just around the corner. Martha Reynolds captured the simplicity of this delicate field of white spring flowers accented with a beige checkboard in the background. Iridescent paint, applied with an airbrush, creates a gauze effect that is reminiscent of morning dew. This delightful new treatment has a texture you can feel!
