The Connoisseur Collection

Each year Fenton selects a small grouping of art objects—unique in design, made in exotic glass treatments and limited in number. This year's collection is made up of three glass treatments for the most discriminating glass collector, Favrene, Burmese and Rosalene.

Fenton Favrene

"Favrene" art glass was first developed in the late 19th century. This beautiful iridescent blue had been made experimentally in Bohemia and Italy, but it was Louis C. Tiffany who made it popular worldwide as Blue Favrite. In 1904 Frederick Carder produced a similar glass at Steuben which he named Blue Auren. Our Fenton Favrene contains cobalt and precious metals and must be worked under exacting conditions of both heat and oxygen to coax out the base color.

As with the Tiffany and Carder glasses, the colors produced vary from intense cobalt blue, to deep gold and silver. The changes in color from one object to another make each a unique work of art.

Burmese and Rosalene

Burmese and Rosalene are the most sought after Fenton art glass colors. Both colors have blushing pink accents which are achieved by the addition of pure gold in the glass formula. When carefully cooled and reheated the gold molecules grow and strike pink. Truly an achievement in glass technology!
