OPALESCENT GLASS WITH COLORED RINGS

Opalescent glass in optic patterns with colored edges was first made in the Fenton line in 1939. Opalescent glass, named for the mysterious gem, recreates the opal's wondrous effects with secret ingredients and a skillful balance of chilling and reheating. The opaque white is coaxed from inside by the glassmaker's fire, trapping a bit of that fire forever in every piece. The colored edge is then deftly spun on the top edge before it is fluted and formed by hand.

THE RINGER

The Ringer deftly spins the sparkling edge of colored glass which appears on Fenton's beautiful crested glassware. The contrasting ring seems like a part of the piece, but is put on separately after the basic shape is formed.

EXOTIC BURMESE GLASS MADE WITH GOLD

Burmese was the name given to this lovely glass treatment in 1885 by its creator Frederick Shirley, of the Mt. Washington Glass Company in New Bedford, Massachusetts. Shirley's formula calls for uranium and gold as the basic coloring materials. Uranium gives the glass its fluorescent yellow color. The glass is cooled slightly in the process of handblowing and when the edges are re-heated for further shaping, the gold particles in the glass join with each other and grow in size, causing the color of the reheated edges to change to the lovely pink typical of this highly desired glass.

Enamored with the soft translucent beauty of Burmese, Fenton Glass chemist Charles W. Goe experimented with innumerable formula variations over a period of many years. With the success of these experiments, Burmese entered the Fenton line in 1970.

Blocker & Blower

THE BLOCKER & BLOWER

In a blowshop, the glowing ball of glass goes to the blocker, a skilled glassworker who shapes and cools the outer skin of the molten glass in a metal or wood block partially submerged in a small tub of water. The water, which cools the white hot glass, contains a soapy substance to lubricate its surface. The blocker then blows the first bubble of air into the gob of molten glass.

The blower is the glassworker most people picture in their minds when thinking of fine handmade glass. Placing the developing piece into its final mould, the blower gives the glass its basic shape.

FAVRENE GLASS WITH SILVER IN THE FORMULA

Favrene art glass was first developed in the late 19th century. This beautiful iridescent blue had been made experimentally in Bohemia and Italy, but it was Louis C. Tiffany who made it popular worldwide as Blue Favrite. In 1904, Frederick Carder produced a similar glass at Steuben which he named Gold Aurene. Fenton has reproduced this lustrous glass formula to match the texture and color created by these two glass masters. Favrene contains cobalt and precious metals and must be worked under exacting conditions of both heat and oxygen to coax out the base color. After the piece has been formed, it is sprayed with a metallic solution and reheated to create a velvety skin.

A woman with blonde hair, identified as Donna Robinson, is shown in profile, focused on her work. She is wearing a white, textured sweater and a watch on her left wrist. She is using a fine brush to apply paint to a small, clear glass vase. In the background, several other similar glass vases are lined up on a wooden shelf, some already decorated with floral patterns. The setting appears to be a workshop or studio.

THE DECORATOR

Skilled artists use deft brush strokes to apply a spectrum of paints made from finely-ground glass called frit. Often the patterns are enhanced with flourishes of 24 karat gold. The decorator works from a sample created by one of Fenton's award-winning decorating designers, but every piece reflects the unique beauty of the individual artist's care and talent. Each item is proudly signed by the artist who painted it, and is then taken to the decoratinglehr where it is reheated to 1000 degrees Fahrenheit. This refiring causes the glass in the paint to melt and fuse to the surface of the piece in a permanent union of handpainted artistry on a canvas of glass.

FRANK L. FENTON LAUNCHED HIS GLASS CAREER 100 YEARS AGO IN 1897.

Frank L. Fenton graduated from high school in 1897 and began work for Indiana Glass that same year, becoming a foreman in 1898. In the next seven years prior to founding Fenton Art Glass, he worked as a designer for Jefferson Glass Company, Bastow Glass Company and Northwood Glass Company.

In 1905, he and his brother John founded The Fenton Art Glass Company in an old glass factory building in Martins Ferry, Ohio, where they painted decorations on glass blanks made by other firms. The Fentons found that they had trouble getting the glass they wanted when they wanted it, and soon decided to produce their own. The first glass from the Fenton factory in Williamstown, West Virginia (shown at left) was made on January 2, 1907.

lives on.

Between 1948 and 1949, the top three members of Fenton management died, and brothers Frank M. Fenton, age 33, and Bill Fenton, age 25, took over as President and Vice-President respectively. The next five years were rough ones, but then milk glass began to sell beautifully all over the country. The team of Frank and Bill led the factory through significant growth for the next 30-plus years. Together they continued to develop new designs based on the flexibility and character of handmade glass. Often they have said that Fenton's success depends on crafting items that cannot be made by machine.

In the late 1970's Bill assumed the presidency and Frank acted as chairman of the board. The leadership of Fenton was passed to the third generation in 1986, where it remains today. Currently George W., the son of Frank M., is president and joining him are ten other family members. Featured items for QVC and items in the regular line "Family Signature Series" are inscribed with the signature of a member of the Fenton family who helps carry on the tradition begun in 1905.

MULBERRY GLASS MADE WITH GOLD

The exotic Mulberry glass color was first made in 1942, but it was sold for only six months because of production difficulties. The color was reintroduced to the Fenton line after additional experimentation and development work in the late 1980's. Mulberry is a hand-blown, cased glass which fades from a deep burgundy to rich blue. It is formed by covering a gold ruby core with blue glass using a special glassmaking technique to create the subtle color transition. The rich Mulberry color is glass craftsmanship at its finest.

PANSIES ON CRANBERRY

Cranberry Glass... made with pure gold the way it was done 100 years ago, and fire struck. The rich Cranberry hue is heightened when encased in a layer of sparkling crystal. While the glass is still on the blowpipe it is mouthblown into an optic mould for the optic pattern and then blown again in the final forming mould. The Finisher then gives the glass its final form by gracefully flaring or crimping.

An added dimension is given to the glass by the decorator's brush by applying pure gold pansies with velvety touches of cream and violet. Each flower is then touched with crystal ice for sparkle. Designed by Frances Burton for all who love Cranberry Glass.

A photograph of Ron Bayles, a man with white hair and glasses, wearing a blue short-sleeved button-down shirt and yellow work gloves. He is focused on his work, using a long metal rod to manipulate a glowing red glass handle. The handle is being shaped into a complex, multi-looped design. The background is dark and out of focus, showing some workshop equipment.

THE HANDLER

One of the most deceptive jobs in making Fenton Art Glass is that of the basket handler. In a few seconds he attaches a glowing ribbon of glass, loops it over the piece to attach the other end, crimps the wobbly handle, and works it to a graceful arch. The stamp with which he attaches the handle is the handler's mark or signature. The design is his alone and every Fenton handle can be traced to the worker who made it.

CRANBERRY OPALESCENT AND CARNIVAL GLASS

Cranberry Opalescent was first developed during the Golden Age of Glass between 1860 and 1900. Fenton re-created the formula in 1936 which is Gold Ruby glass, made with pure gold, encased in a layer of French Opalescent glass. It is first blown in an optic mould to provide the pattern and then carefully cooled and reheated causing the coolest sections to turn white when reheated. The work of art is completed by mastercraftsmen as they blow the piece into the final forming mould and shape the milky edges.

Carnival Glass was the major product for Fenton from 1907 until 1920. Originally called Iridescent Glass, it is achieved by spraying secret mixtures of metallic salts on various colors of hot glass to give us the rainbow of color distinctive to each piece.
