Vasa Murrhina

Fenton—America's Finest Glass in Color

Vasa Murrhina

MANY CENTURIES ago glassmakers discovered a way to fuse different colors of glass into singularly beautiful glassware. Their artistic efforts inspired an era of imaginative glassmaking which reached its peak in the famed Vasa Murrhina glass of the nineteenth century.

Fenton now brings back Vasa Murrhina, a glass so complicated to make that it can be produced only in a limited amount. Because of its intricate color patterns each piece is an individual creation unlike any other.

Vasa Murrhina, which means vessel of gems, is well named. The sparkling flecks of ancient aventurine glass and other colors give it a jewel-like appearance and blend together into a finished tapestry of distinctive character. Because it is Fenton it is authentic—made by hand, the only way it can be made.

Authentic Handmade

THERE IS A personal kind of beauty in things made by hand which can be achieved in no other way. At Fenton, pure natural materials subjected to raging heat provide the molten glass from which each finished piece begins its separate being. But to this molten glass is added the most important of all influences—the skill of creative men.

As our craftsmen patiently persuade molten glass into lasting forms pleasing to the eye, the meaning of made by hand becomes clear, for Fenton glass reflects the artistry of the men who made it. It is this hallmark of personal creativeness which gives to Fenton its intimate beauty.

This is why each piece of Fenton is authentically handmade—to create the personal beauty that people appreciate, want and buy.
