Studio Glass Artist NATHAN SHEAFOR

Under the watchful eyes of glass artisan and designer Nathan Sheafor, Fenton's Frank Workman uses the traditional "jacks" tool to shape the molten glass into a vase. Later in the production process, a crystal stem and black foot will be applied to the piece. Each completed vase reflects the remarkable skills needed to create these splendid examples of handmade art glass.

Fenton Art Glass is both pleased and proud of its collaboration with glass artisan Nathan Sheafor. A native of Kansas, Nathan is part-owner of The Glass Forge and Gallery in Grants Pass, Oregon. His glass art, often described as "Venetian style," combines glass colors and forms in unusual ways. Each piece is distinctive and unique, and all reflect the finest traditions in the history of glassmaking.

Working with Fenton craftsmen in 2008, Nathan Sheafor designed and created items for inclusion in the Fenton Studio Collection. "Nathan's love of color, shape and form caught our eye at a showing of gallery artists," said Nancy Fenton, Director of Design at Fenton Art Glass. "His limited edition pieces use recycled Fenton colors, adding an ecological dimension to the Fenton Studio Collection."

Speaking of his time at Fenton, Nathan Sheafor has high praise for Fenton glass artisans. "We learned from each other," he said. "The support and togetherness of the Fenton Art Glass family allowed me to be relaxed and at ease with my design decisions. Both collectors and the general public should be grateful to Fenton for keeping this cherished art alive."

Fenton USA- Fall 2008 Collection

September 10, 2008

Dear Friends of Fenton Art Glass,

As many of you have heard, as a result of the tremendous response we received from our customers in 2007, we have been able to reorganize our business and continue making glass right here in West Virginia under the Fenton USA brand. Our ability to continue operations is clearly a result of overwhelming sales support from thousands of collectors and dedicated Fenton dealers across the USA. We are now very excited to announce the unveiling of our Fall 2008 Collection.

Fall 2008 is headlined by our introduction of master craftsman, Nathan Sheafor. Both of Nathan's creations are strictly limited to only 250 pieces and we are expecting quite a frenzy as collectors try and capture these creations in time for Christmas. You will also enjoy four beautifully carved selections by Kelsey Murphy and Robert Bomkamp. Don't miss your opportunity to capture one of the "In the Glen" lamps made in Chocolate glass, limited to only 250 pieces. Kelsey and Robert have created the most stunning Cameo creations ever introduced by Fenton for the Fall collection.

Two of our most popular color statements also make a return with the Fall offering, Aubergine and Chocolate. Aubergine is very deep and rich...most likely the most popular purple color ever made in Fenton company history. Chocolate has been requested countless times by our collectors and Fenton is the only art glass company in the world to master this unique color. You can enjoy both statements non-decorated, or decorated with their accompanying motif.

Enclosed you will find a color illustration of our latest offering, Fall 2008. This collection includes more than 60 new pieces of Fenton Art Glass. All handcrafted in the U.S.A. at our facility in Williamstown, West Virginia and bearing the new Fenton USA logo which includes the letters USA embossed in the glass.

In order to ensure your dealer has the product you want, we encourage you to contact your local Fenton dealer immediately if you wish to have one of the Fall 2008 items. We encourage you to expand your collection, accent your favorite room in the house, preorder a special gift for Christmas or just spoil yourself. No matter the occasion, for over 103 years, Fenton Art Glass has added color and life to homes all over the world. Our goal is to continue a family business legacy in America. We hope you are excited about the products in our Fall collection and we personally invite you to join us as we continue to rebuild and recover in 2008.

Thanks for all your support,

The Fenton Family
